House passes anti-drug bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House, debating a massive anti-drug bill, approved an amendment yesterday that would require U.S. troops to be sent to the nation's borders and would give them power to arrest drug smugglers.

The vote was 237-177 for the proposal as House members rejected arguments that it was unconstitutional to give U.S. troops civilian police enforcement authority.

Supporters said the amendment contained constitutional safeguards, and they argued that civilian enforcement agencies are unable to cope with massive numbers of ships and planes carrying drugs.

The House also voted 242-171 for an amendment that would give state and local law enforcement agencies a bonanza in federal grants to fight illegal drugs.

The original bill would have allocated $300 million for the grants in fiscal years 1987 and 1988, but the change sponsored by Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., would raise the figure to $1.3 billion. In addition, the amendment would reduce the 50 percent matching figure for states and localities to 10 percent.

"THE REAL front-line troops have to be the local law enforcement personnel," Rangel said.

But Rep. Dan Lungren, R-Calif. said, "This is the kitchen sink amendment... just throw in the kitchen sink, half-a-million dollars, just like that."

The overall legislation would escalate the war on drugs by pouring billions of dollars into enforcement, education, rehabilitation, crop eradication and withholding of aid from recalcitrant producer countries.

The amendment involving use of troops was offered by Reps. Duncan Hunter, R-Calif., and Tommy Robinson, D-Ark. It not only orders deployment of military personnel, but requires the president to halt drug smuggling at the borders within 45 days.

Robert Sims, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, said the Defense Department was committed to assisting in the fight against drugs but could not support proposals to establish "a significant military role in police activities such as interdiction, arrests and search-and-seizure."

"Generally, Secretary (Caspar) Weinberger's view is that it is a bad precedent to use the Army as a police force," Sims said, adding that Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV had written a letter to congressional leaders earlier this week objecting to the proposals.

Water tower ready for use

by Valerie Lonero
staff reporter

Bowling Green's water tower will soon be in use despite minor problems with city water lines last week, the city's public works director said yesterday.

Although several area streets were flooded due to a buildup of pressure in the water valves, David Barber said the tower will be in service on Monday.

"The operators who were on duty at the time the water was to be turned off closed the valve too fast and created a water pressure surge in the city water system," he said. "The water lines that broke flooded the streets."

West Poe Road, City Park Road and Parkwood Avenue at Hillcrest suffered the most damage to their water lines. But the worst water line break was on West Poe Road.

"We lost about a quarter of a million gallons of water. I was called at 4:30 Friday morning about the break, and everything was repaired as soon as we found out," he said.

Bowling Green High School was temporarily closed Friday because of the break, he said.

The combined weight of the water and the tower is 15 million pounds, and the tank contains about one and a half million gallons of water.

"THE NEED for the tower came two or three years ago. We came real close to running out of water because our system wasn't meeting the demands of the city - there wasn't enough capacity," he said. "The tower acts as a reservoir for the city."

Barber said the city began to fill the tower Sept. 2 by pumping water into the tower in stages and gradually purifying the water.

"We added about 50 parts per million of chlorine (about 50-100 times the concentration in drinking water)," he said. "The bacteria test appears acceptable, and the tower will soon be in operation."

SICSIC SEZ...

Well, maybe next week. The once familiar hand-lettered red and white signs from SICSIC usually seen on campus have been absent so far this year.

The 40-year-old secret spirit organization has been inactive this fall due to lack of a faculty advisor.

Larry Weiss, director of alumni affairs and assistant vice president for University relations, was the advisor to SICSIC for the past two years. He resigned the position last spring.

"I've taken on additional responsibilities here in the office," he said. "I didn't want to do it if I was unable to devote the time to it."

Weiss said that a new advisor for SICSIC will be named in about a week.

"For the good of the group, we wanted to find someone else," he said.

The group is composed of six seniors who remain anonymous while generating spirit for campus events.

SICSIC #3 said the group will resume their activities next week.

"It's just a matter of working out some details," he said. "Everyone's very sorry to see (Weiss) go, but we understand his responsibilities have increased."

Disabled urge policy changes

Improvements anticipated with hiring of new directors

by Mike McIntyre
editor

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of a three-part series on disabled students at the University. It examines changes suggested by disabled people for the Department of Handicapped Services and reports what progress is being made in the search for a new director of that department and of Affirmative Action, which houses handicapped services at the University.

Some disabled students view the opening of the position of director of Handicapped Services as a way for the department to change for the better.

Janet ScottBey, who was recently appointed director of Affirmative Action when Suzanne Crawford left the post, was previously in charge of Handicapped Services. She left the University Monday to take the Affirmative Action director's job at the University of Tennessee.

Jim Pelfrey, a blind student at the University, said he hopes University officials will be open to suggestions when hiring a new director, and when hiring a new director of Affirmative Action.

In yesterday's News, Pelfrey said he perceived an attitude problem with the Department of Handicapped Services. He said he believed the department did the minimum to get by. Now, he hopes that will change.

"I hope they find someone who has had direct experience working with disabled students," he said. "Someone who is familiar with issues which would confront a (disabled) student socially and architecturally."

He said the most important quality in a director would be his awareness of issues disabled students face.

"WE NEED somebody tuned in to what's going on, not just sitting in the office drinking coffee and pushing paper," he said.

Pelfrey suggested changes in Handicapped Services which would include a taped books center at the University. He said he would like it if putting books on audio tape was made part of the curriculum for some special education courses. That way, the tapes could be stored and other blind students could use them in the future.

Presently, Pelfrey orders taped books from an outside source and hires people to read books to him which are not available on tape.

Harry Hoemann, professor of psychology and advisor to Dawn Bostleman, a deaf student attending the University, suggested a way for handicapped services to provide an interpreter for deaf students.

He said the University could create a classified-level position, such as a secretary, for someone who has good interpreting skills. This person could be released from clerical duties to interpret for deaf students when necessary, he said.

INGRID KOBER, counselor at the Ohio Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation, said she believes the University could follow the example of other state universities. She said schools such as Cleveland State University, Columbus Technical Institute and Wright State University in Dayton have at least one full-time interpreter on staff. She said many schools have several interpreters on staff.

Philip Mason, executive assistant to University President Paul Olscamp, said a committee made up of representatives of different University departments has been formed to fill the Handicapped Services and Affirmative Action posts. He said the committee will meet Tuesday to discuss plans to advertise the position.

In the meantime, Mason said he and Olscamp are examining options for temporary replacements and said it is possible he will take over the directors' jobs until the new people are hired.

Mason said the Department of Handicapped Services would be open to suggestions such as those offered by Pelfrey, Hoemann and Kober.

"If suggestions come forward that would improve the operation of the department or enhance the services it provides, we're going to give them serious consideration," he said.

Egypt, Israel begin summit talks

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (AP) - President Hosni Mubarak and Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres talked privately for three hours yesterday, and Mubarak said Israel's stand on the Palestinian issue is improving.

"We have concentrated heavily on the Palestinian issue, which is vital and important for the peace process," Mubarak said at a news conference after meeting with Peres in the first Israeli-Egyptian summit in five years.

"I think the Israeli position is improving a lot," he said.

At a 90-minute working lunch also attended by other officials from both countries, Peres said Palestinians "have a right to participate in the determination of their own future" but he mentioned no changes in Israel's position on the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Peres has insisted that Israel will not negotiate with the PLO, which it considers a terrorist organization. Before his departure from Israel, Peres promised his Cabinet he would make no concessions regarding the Palestinians.

THE SUMMIT began after the two leaders shook hands inside Ras el-Tin, a seaside presidential palace, and then posed for pictures. They then met alone and talked in English, dispensing with translators and other aides.

In all the two leaders met for 4½ hours, including the working dinner on a balcony overlooking the Mediterranean.

Uri Savir, Peres' spokesman, said "the spirit and atmosphere was extremely friendly."

"On the issue of improving relations and on the peace process, there was a wide degree of understanding between the two gentlemen," he said.

Mubarak said that with the signing by the two sides the day before of an agreement on a formula for resolving a border dispute, "I think it will be easy to move forward with the main issue, which is the Palestinian issue."

Mubarak said the bargaining position of moderate countries like Egypt deteriorated greatly after PLO leader Yasser Arafat froze an agreement with Jordan that aimed at peace negotiations through an international conference.

"The current situation has a lot of problems. This freezing puts us in a difficult position for our negotiations, but we are trying," he said.

"We must help each other to solve the problem. We must make an effort to solve it. And we mustn't ask Israel to make the effort alone. Egypt cannot impose a solution by itself," Mubarak said.

Alexandria was the site of the last Israeli-Egyptian summit, in August 1981 between Egypt's Anwar Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin.

Moslem extremists assassinated Sadat two months later.

Egypt is the only Arab nation with diplomatic relations with Israel, and any overture to the Jewish state is considered a political gamble for Mubarak.

Advice could better services for disabled

Handicapped services departments are important in any institution. They ensure that disabled people will have the same opportunity to receive services as those who do not have a disability.

We hope the University keeps in mind how important such a department is on a college campus when choosing new directors for the Department of Handicapped Services and for Affirmative Action.

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 makes it illegal for any institution receiving federal aid to discriminate on the basis of a handicap.

Since Section 504 was enacted, state institutions, such as the University, have worked to become barrier-free and have tried to meet legal requirements to accommodate disabled people.

But some institutions go beyond the law. They do more than their legal share to accommodate disabled students.

One example is Wright State University in Dayton, which was built with disabled people in mind. The university, which opened in 1967, is barrier-free. In addition, many programs for disabled people are offered, services such as interpreters are provided, and research into disabilities is stressed.

We believe the University would do well to follow this example.

Accommodating disabled students should not be done reluctantly because some law says so. It is a moral responsibility of any public institution to make itself accessible to everyone - equally.

University students, professors, and outside counselors have offered suggestions to make Handicapped Services at the University better.

We hope the selection committee carefully chooses new directors and we employ those directors, whoever they may be, to listen to the advice.

To the trendy go the spoils

OUT of WHACK

by Craig Hergert

Last month a new survey of college students came out. Sponsored by a trade association, the "College Watch '86" survey presents a profile of today's college students that is riddled with inconsistencies.

Although the survey revealed that the group is more conservative than the preceding generation, 70 percent of the students responding to the survey said industry cannot be trusted to handle toxic wastes and only 28 percent said abortion should be illegal. These answers don't indicate an avalanche of conservative attitudes.

Another response seemed inconsistent with reality. According to the UPI story I read, the survey reveals that students "disapprove of sex before marriage." Now, I don't have a lot of data on this kind of behavior, you understand, but judging from what I've overheard, there's still a few students out there who don't disapprove. Maybe taking the survey last winter has something to do with this response. It's possible the respondents' hormones were temporarily frozen.

The most fascinating part of the survey, though, deals with the students' goals. The headline for the story in the Bowling Green Sentinel-Tribune read "Making money is top student goal." Two out of three of the students surveyed want to make "a good deal of money," and 34 percent want to make a good deal more than a good deal. They believe, according to the survey, "being a millionaire before age 35 is important."

As for myself, I have trouble getting that excited about money, possibly because I've never made any of it to speak of. I'm 30 years old, and I haven't yet earned $10,000 in a single year. The only time I have any interest in the money section in USA Today is when it's raining and I don't have my umbrella handy.

But I had another reason for being interested in the survey. As a teacher of college students, I'm interested in knowing what's on their minds. I'm interested in knowing that, according to the story, "59 percent are completely or somewhat in accord with the statement that 'It's not what you know, it's whom you know that helps you get ahead.'"

As a teacher, I can't help but be concerned about this response. In my two classes this fall, I've encountered a bunch of students who seem bright and eager to learn, and I hope they don't change their ways to suit this year's fashions.

Whether or not they change, as the survey suggests, I think that some changes should be made in response to the new attitudes. I think, for example, that we should start rewriting children's stories so the youngsters can know what they're getting into when they enter college.

With a little reworking, one traditional fairy tale could look like this. I think you'll find it to be every bit as believable as the one about the wolf who eats a grandmother in one bite.

Once upon a time in a university in the Midwest, there lived a freshman by the name of Tony Spenderella.

Spenderella was, like all his fellow students in the eighties, basically optimistic and upbeat, but he had a problem. As a freshman, he was required to take certain impractical courses, such as history, philosophy and composition.

One night while he toiled in his room, studying, his frat brothers, who were upperclassmen, were putting on suit jackets and ties and generally making themselves look handsome in the extreme.

"Hey, where ya goin'?" asked Spenderella.

"We're going to the big Job Fair being held at the grand ballroom," said one of his frat brothers, "so we can meet influential people, secure jobs before the ink on our diplomas is dry, and become millionaires before we're 35."

"Sounds awesome," sighed Spenderella. "Can't I go with you?"

"No, Spenderella. You need to keep studying. Not to learn anything, of course, but to get your grades up, for if you don't, our frat will have a low overall average, and we'll look bad."

And off they went to the fair, leaving Spenderella to stare disconsolately at his three textbooks - "American History," "From Socrates to Sartre," and "Roughdrafts."

"Books," he pouted. "If only these books were good for something." Just then, a gust of wind ruffled his Ronald Reagan-Commemorative-curtains and, in a flash of gold dust, who should he see in front of him but a silver-haired man dressed in an impeccable blue suit.

"Wow!" cried Spenderella. "John Molloy!"

"I couldn't help but overhear you knocking books, young man," said Molloy, brushing gold dust off his jacket. "True, the ones you have there are worthless, but this one did all right for me." And he presented Spenderella with an autographed copy of "Dress for Success."

"Thanks, Mr. Molloy," gushed Spenderella. "But why are you here?"

"Why, I always respond to the needs of good consumers. We're going to the Job Fair. But first, you must be suitably attired."

And with that he took a five-dollar cigar from his vest pocket and aimed it at the three books on Spenderella's desk. In an instant, a fairy-Godmother-type transformation occurred. The history text became a blue pin-stripe suit with vest, shirt, pants and tie. The philosophy text became a pair of patent leather shoes. And the writing text became a handkerchief.

"Wow!" exclaimed Spenderella. "And I thought these books weren't worth anything."

"They weren't," said Molloy. "Not until I came along. Always remember, it's not what you know..."

"It's whom you know," interrupted Spenderella.

"Oh, go ahead and say 'who you know,'" said Molloy. "Proper English always makes me nervous."

And without further adieu they went to the job fair. While they were there, Spenderella smiled at all the corporate representatives who were on hand, and they were so impressed by his personality and clothes and by his friend that they all made a special note of him.

The minute after he graduated, his mailbox was overflowing with requests from all of the corporations in the Fortune 500.

"Oh, boy!" chirped Spenderella. "My ship has come in."

It had indeed. Spenderella drove to Silicon Valley in his brand new BMW and lived wealthy ever after. He never read another impractical book in his life, which meant that even if he had been unhappy, he would never have known it.

WHAT FOREIGN POWER IS BEHIND THE KILLING AND TERRORIZING OF THOUSANDS OF AMERICANS EVERY YEAR?

Letters

Delts persevere

Dear Editor:

I am a fifth-year senior and will be graduating in December. I have never - until now - cared enough about the headlines of The BG News to take the time to write a letter to the Editor.

This letter is more or less intended for my fraternity brothers, but with all of the recent publicity, I thought the entire campus might benefit by sharing these thoughts. This isn't intended to be a "my house is the best house" letter because I know that there are several excellent fraternities on the BGSU campus. I'm only expressing my personal opinions.

As reported by The BG News, the brothers of Delta Tau Delta have been sanctioned for "hazing." This letter is not to further contest those allegations. That die is cast. Nor is it my intention to complain about the "sanctions" placed on our chapter, which, for those who do not know, include social and athletic probation. That is severe, but temporary. The Delts will "hang in there."

Throughout my five years here, I have seen the Delts host terrific parties, routinely win athletic championships, provide extensive community service, and deliver average scholarship. The sanctions placed on us are forcing us to use our creativity, our tenacity to overcome obstacles, which I believe will make us a better chapter in the future.

For those of you in fraternities or sororities, wish us luck. Imagine how your chapter would deal with problems similar to ours. It won't be easy; but, then again, we have already had a good deal of success in that arena.

We might not be able to have teas/parties with sororities, but we have already proved our ability to have fun without alcohol. We will continue to shovel snow and rake leaves for senior citizens. We will continue to donate our labor to worthy charities.

We will continue to proudly wear our letters and proudly claim our allegiance to Bowling Green State University. We will continue to encourage our new members to act with dignity, deliberation, responsibility and compassion. We will continue our traditions of patriotism, courage and brotherhood. As for scholarship...

Fraternally,

Presidential instinct stimulates response

by Gregg M. Richardson

Political observers have occupied themselves for six years now in grasping for superlatives to sufficiently praise President Reagan's alleged political instincts, but a feature in the September issue of Harper's magazine suggests that the president may harbor even more elemental instincts of which most of us were totally unaware.

In discussing the logistics of White House press conferences, the article points out that the president has a predilection to call on reporters who are wearing anything red, which happens to be Nancy Reagan's favorite color. Reporters, noticing this, have begun frequently wearing articles of red clothing in order to attract the president's attention.

This is a striking example of coevolution of a type frequently encountered in nature.

For example, in one species of butterfly, the female does not emerge from dormancy until a couple of weeks after the male. In the meantime, there is a plant that produces a flower which closely mimics the appearance of the female butterfly. Since no real females are yet available, the male attempts to mate with the flower and in the process helps to propagate the species by aiding in pollination.

In a similar way, those White House reporters who mimic Nancy's red dresses are more successful in drawing the attention of the president, thereby increasing their fitness, through the enhancement of their own careers.

The president also benefits in this arrangement, since the brightly adorned reporters he calls on are less likely to ask him difficult or embarrassing questions.

One can almost imagine David Attenborough, knee-deep in jelly beans, out of breath and squinting into the camera, as he explains the ecology of White House press conferences. He turns, prods the president awake, and waves a red handkerchief in his face. Immediately, the president instinctively calls on the red handkerchief and Attenborough triumphantly gives expression to the remarkable diversity and resourcefulness of life on earth.

Nevertheless, at the June 11 press conference described in Harper's, the president was unable to understand a question put to him by a red-carnationed reporter, even after the reporter had thoughtfully rephrased it for him several times. Later, Reagan explained that he had been concentrating so hard on choosing a reporter to call on, that he had forgotten what to say.

Naturally most Americans, as a matter of national pride, want their president to be well-informed and adept at articulating important issues. The extraordinary single-mindedness exhibited by Mr. Reagan in this incident suggests endless possibilities for educational strategies.

For example, by utilizing a color-coded system of rewards and punishments, I am confident that the president could be trained to perform many simple tasks that have given him trouble in the past, such as distinguishing between small Latin American countries, recognizing his cabinet members at state receptions, and remembering whether or not submarine-based nuclear missiles can be recalled after launch.

Given that the leading presidential candidates for 1988 include a college football star, a pro basketball star, and a fundamentalist preacher, I'm sure that such a system would prove edifying in future administrations as well.

The prospects for biology graduates are looking bright.

Richardson is a reference librarian in the University's Science Library.

USG positions still available due to apathy

by Susan McDonald
staff reporter

Although Undergraduate Student Government encourages student participation in its committees on such issues as academic honesty or financial aid, low student response has forced some positions to remain unfilled.

"Every year these positions are hard to fill," said Vice-President Jeff Slater, who said USG had only received applications for 35-40 of the 51 positions.

"... (W)ith 16,000 students, they (the positions) shouldn't be hard to fill," he said.

The 30 USG committees are made up of students, faculty and administrators and address issues such as public safety, cultural events and intercollegiate athletics.

"The idea is for an active student voice to be heard on the University committees, which are run by faculty and administrators. They want to take the student into account.

This is their way of letting us know they are here for us and they want to hear our views," Slater said.

One of the major reasons for these positions not being filled is student apathy, he said, which forced USG to extend its deadline for applications from Sept. 4 to Sept. 11.

"A LOT of students are here just to get an education and leave, instead of participating in their education. Participation on one of these committees can be an important part of their education," he said.

Although students have not yet applied for these remaining positions, Slater said the response has been better this year than last.

Slater credited Mike McGreevey and Brad Krider, last year's USG president and vice president, for the student government's high visibility, which he said raised student interest in serving on these committees.

False alarms have officials fired up

by Linda Hoy
staff reporter

A rash of false fire alarms in residence halls last year has prompted the University to clamp down on offenders.

There were 109 false alarms reported in residence halls last year. Founders Quadrangle had the highest number of false alarms last year, followed closely by Rodgers Quadrangle, Bill Lanning, director of residence management, said.

Students found guilty of pulling a false fire alarm will be suspended from the University, Mary Edmonds, vice president of student affairs, said.

"We're going to enforce the existing rules," she said, calling the number of false alarms last year "totally intolerable."

Residence hall staffs have been instructed to check every room during a fire drill, and officials are asking residents to report students who pull a false alarm.

"It's not that you're turning in somebody," Chapman hall director Augie Galvan said. "What you're doing is making the building safer."

Students found remaining in the building during an alarm will be given a written warning, referred to Standards and Procedures and receive a possible fine, Galvan said.

EDMONDS EXPRESSED concern that the repeated number of false alarms result in students' having a nonchalant attitude towards a fire alarm.

"Students just get tired of going out (of the building during an alarm)," she said.

Galvan said, "Taking an alarm seriously could save your life."

Residence halls to highlight themes

by Jared O. Wadley
copy editor

University students living in residence halls may have noticed that their hall has a theme that will be highlighted this year.

Whether a student spends "Late Night(s)" with Rodgers Quad, or fights at the side of "Captain Kohl," each hall's theme will incorporate the Residents Exploring a Challenging Horizon (REACH) program sponsored by Residential Services.

Barbara Keller, director of residence education, said REACH programs will focus on a pertinent issue or concern each month. These programs will be sponsored by Residential Services, even though the residence halls will have their own themes, Keller said.

"We don't have a theme for September; however in October, the theme will deal with alcohol awareness which will corroborate with National Awareness Week during Oct. 20-26," Keller said.

Karlene Gargac, program coordinator of Residence Life, said the themes for the remaining months should be known this week.

GARGAC ADDED that the following is a list of the individual themes which the residence halls will center on this year.

Offenhauer - "Offenhauer Towers - A Class Act"
Prout - Self-Awareness, but no slogan
Founders - "We Found it in Founders"

McDonald - "Get H.I.G.H. in McDonald" (Helping Individuals Grow Holistically)

Kohl - "Captain Kohl" - fighting to give students the freedom to get involved (a different mission each month)

Conklin - "Make it Happen"
Rodgers - "Late Night with

Rodgers Quad"
Harshman - "The Heart of it All"

Anderson - "Anderson Island"
Bromfield - "The Pride is Back"

Chapman - "R.E.A.C.H. - Aiming for Success"

Dunbar - "And Enjoyin' Every Minute of it" and "Doin' Time in Dunbar"

Ashley - "Ashley, Oh Ashley"

Batchelder - "Catch the Wave"

Compton - "The One to Watch"

Darrow - "Reach Wellness"

GSS focuses on grad needs

Priorities include research funding, contract rights

by Ron Coulter
chief copy editor

While many University students are struggling through 100- and 200-level classes, the graduate students who teach many of these classes are, in addition, taking a full load of classes at the 500 and 600 level.

Because of their circumstances, graduate students have problems and needs that aren't shared by the rest of the student population. The Graduate Student Senate is intended to meet those needs.

GSS consists of 56 elected master's and Ph.D. students. It includes a six-person executive committee, made up of four officers and two representatives-at-large, in addition to a general assembly.

Sheila Harrington, GSS president, said the reps-at-large, who will be elected next month by the assembly, often serve as "watchdogs" for underrepresented groups on campus.

The 50 members of the general assembly are selected by the academic departments. Typically, each department selects one or two representatives, depending on the proportion of graduate students within the department.

GSS has standing committees for programming, finance and welfare, and ad hoc (temporary special) committees. The Senate also assigns representatives to serve on University committees and advisory boards.

HARRINGTON SAID GSS

and the Undergraduate Student Government seem to have an effective influence by serving on advisory committees.

"The Board of Trustees is especially sensitive to the need of graduate students," she said.

Harrington said GSS has several primary concerns for the 1986-87 school year. These include comparing University stipends with those of other universities and obtaining increased funding for research; maintaining an adequate periodicals collection at the University libraries and clarifying the rights and responsibilities attached to graduate contracts.

GSS will hold its first meeting this afternoon at 2:30 in the assembly room on the second floor of McFall Center.

Thefts reported Wednesday

Two bicycles stolen in city; wallet taken from woman outside Foodtown

A woman reported the theft of her wallet Wednesday in front of the Foodtown supermarket, 1044 N. Main St.

She told police that she was walking to the front door when a man she described as white, 5 feet 8 inches tall, skinny and with brown, shoulder-length hair ran up to her and grabbed her wallet, which she was holding in her hand.

The man, who was wearing worn jeans and an army jacket, then ran to the rear of the store.

POLICE SAID the wallet contained the woman's driver's license, the title and registration to her car and food stamps worth $48.

City police reported two bicycles stolen Wednesday night.

A 16-inch yellow bike with "Cabbage Patch Kids" markings and a white basket was reported stolen at 6:10 p.m. from 628 S. Main St. The bike had a "JULIA" nameplate and is valued at $50, police said.

A Huffy "Le Grande" 12-speed, painted white with red trim was reported stolen at 9:40 p.m. from 471 S. Summit St. The bike had a water-bottle holder and sponge handlebar covers and is valued at $115. The owner told police that the bike was locked at the time of the theft.

March primary urged for Ohio

COLUMBUS (AP) - Moving Ohio's presidential primary from May to March in an effort to develop a Midwest regional primary is a matter of economic and political survival for the state, Sen. Stanley Aronoff, R-Cincinnati, told a House panel yesterday.

Aronoff created that assessment as the House Elections, Land Conveyance and Township Committee opened hearings on his Senate-passed bill under which Ohio would hold its presidential primary election on the third Tuesday in March starting in 1988.

As a result, Ohio's primary would occur on the same day as the election in Illinois.

"You've created with those two states alone a Midwest primary where other states will follow, in my opinion. But even if they don't, you've created an important place in the nominating process for the state of Ohio," he said.

Backers of the switch, who include Democratic Secretary of State Sherrod Brown, say the Ohio primary now occurs too late in the presidential candidate selection process. Aronoff also cited the decision of 13 southern states to establish a "Super Tuesday" primary on the second Tuesday in March.

"THE CRADLE of presidents, Ohio, in my opinion, based on a media world as we have it today, (faces) extinction insofar as the presidential nominating process," Aronoff said.

"In my opinion, you have to fight fire with fire. I'm not suggesting that we come in and try to compete on the same day with the South. They'd beat us, fair and square. They organized, they did their job," he said.

"But if we're just going to sit with our heads in the sand like ostriches and let them control the nominating process of the presidency of the United States, then we get what we deserve. We'll get nothing," Aronoff said.

Aronoff, who headed a session on the regional primary at a meeting of the Midwest Council of State Governments last month in Missouri, said other states have been waiting to see whether Ohio will change its election date before deciding whether to join the movement.

Residents opposed to Perry plant

CLEVELAND (AP) - A survey of Lake County residents shows that many who live near the Perry nuclear power plant have negative feelings about it. But the plant's operator says the survey may not be an accurate reflection of residents' thoughts.

The survey by Madison Township trustees was sent to 7,406 residents of Madison Township and Madison Village, both east of the plant in North Perry in Lake County. The Cleveland Electric Illuminating Co. built the plant, 35 miles east of Cleveland.

A majority of the 709 people who answered the survey said they believe the plant could be the site of a major accident, has already had a negative effect on their lifestyles, and that its startup should be delayed until the plant's evacuation plan is reviewed and improved.

The respondents also said they would not know where to flee after an accident at the plant, even though they've received information about the plant evacuation plan.

Tuesday night voted 2-1 to ask for a delay in the startup of the plant.

The Perry plant currently has a low-power operating license. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is considering granting a full-power license, but has been prevented from doing so by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

CEI spokesmen F. Lee Bailey and William King on Wednesday said the survey should not be considered an accurate reflection of community feeling about the plant.

And Jack DeSario, a political science professor at Case Western Reserve University who does political polls, said the survey return rate is too low to accurately gauge public attitudes on the plant.

"A 10 percent return rate is not very good," said DeSario. "I'd be very cautious with this. What you're getting here is a biased return rate. What you're getting here is a few people in the community who are concerned."

CEI spokesmen said they be lieve residents who did not respond to the survey, or 90 percent of those who were sent questionnaires, support the plant. They said the survey could be interpreted to show that only 7 percent of area residents oppose a plant startup.

THAT INTERPRETATION is based on results showing 69.8 percent of the respondents wanted the trustees to pass a resolution delaying the startup. Of the respondents, 495 favored the delay, 195 were opposed and 19 were undecided.

"It appears, with the low rate of return, that it's not a really big issue, pro or con," Bailey said.

CEI's criticism prompted an angry response from Madison Township Trustee Chairman Theresa A. Gerred, who said CEI is distorting the survey results, and county Administrator Kenneth Gauntner, who supervised the survey.

"If they can distort something we did in so much honesty and so much good faith, what else have they distorted?" said Gerred.

The survey contained 15 questions supplied by township trustees, CEI and a member of the Lake County Concerned Citizens, an anti-nuclear power group.

Glenn denying FEC loan probe, Kindness says

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio, yesterday accused Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, of denying that the Federal Election Commission was investigating bank loans to his presidential campaign when Glenn had been informed of the probe in May 1984.

Glenn and four Ohio banks were named in a civil lawsuit filed Wednesday by the FEC alleging violations of federal election law in the funding of Glenn's unsuccessful 1984 bid for the Democratic nomination.

In documents filed in the suit, the FEC said Glenn and the four Ohio banks were notified May 9, 1984, that the commission had found "reason to believe" the law had been violated. Following an investigation, the FEC informed Glenn on June 10, 1986, that it had found "probable cause to believe" that violations had occurred.

"It's unfortunate that during a period of over two years, Senator Glenn was denying that there was any FEC action, that there was an investigation going on," Kindness, Glenn's Republican opponent, said at a news conference. "I think the question of integrity is certainly raised by what occurred over that period of time."

GLENN SAID in a statement that the people of Ohio know he has lived his entire life honestly and above board and that he is sorry his Republican opponent is questioning his integrity for political reasons.

"If there was any previous misunderstanding about how long the FEC has been 'investigating' the committee's loans, it was only because I was unaware until recently that the FEC proceedings had reached the point that constituted a formal investigation," Glenn said. "But that misunderstanding is hardly a major issue in this campaign."

The suit stems from loans of $500,000 apiece to Glenn from Ameritrust, Bank One, BancOhio National Bank and Huntington National Bank.

Gophers' QB reinstated

BG must stop Foggie to beat Minnesota

by Tom Reed
sports editor

The "Foggie" situation which had hung over the University of Minnesota football program has cleared.

Last night, the NCAA reinstated the Golden Gophers' star quarterback Rickey Foggie and backup linebacker Dan Pollard after listening to their appeals.

Both players will be eligible to participate in tomorrow night's game against Bowling Green at the Hubert Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis.

TUESDAY, THE NCAA declared Foggie and Pollard indefinitely ineligible because the UM Athletic Department supplied them with airplane tickets more than a year ago. Spokesmen at UM said the ticket purchases were a short-term loan.

Both athletes later reimbursed the school.

UM Athletic Director Paul Giel said the NCAA Appeals Board was, "very impressed with the comments given by both young men."

Foggie, Minnesota's two-time MVP, expressed his relief after hearing last night's decision.

"I was very nervous and scared," Foggie said. "But I knew (Minnesota) coach John Gutekunst and the university were behind me."

The valuable junior signalcaller led the team in both rushing and passing catagories last season. He also guided the Gophers a 20-13 win over Clemson in the Independence Bowl.

Though Foggie could've been suspended for the entire season,

BG Coach Moe Ankney figured the multi-talented quarterback would play tomorrow.

"The more I heard about it, the more I believed those players would be reinstated," Ankney said last night. "I don't think it will affect the team very much."

Throughout the week, the Falcons prepared as if the Foggie incident never occurred.

BG players believe the key to upsetting the Gophers is containing the quarterback in their option-oriented offense.

While most people hate to see it roll in, the Falcons fear letting this "Fog" roll out.

"We can't let Foggie get out side because that's when he's really dangerous," safety Dean Bryson said. "He's an excellent runner and can burn you deep with a pass."

Because BG doesn't play many teams which utilize the option, Bryson added it has taken a major readjustment to prepare for the Gophers.

"You have to think totally different when you're playing a team which runs the option," he said. "When you see the quarterback roll out you're thinking, 'he's gonna run.' Then all of a sudden he throws the ball. He can make you look stupid."

Meanwhile, Big Ten teams have had a history of making the Mid-American Conference look pretty silly. In head-to-head competition, the Big Ten owns a decisive 64-17 advantage.

However, many of the Falcons believe they have a two-fold advantage entering tomorrow night's matchup. First, this will be Minnesota's first game of the

BG tourney ready to start

Youngsters' sports heroes such as Walter Payton, Larry Bird and Pete Rose come to life instantly with just a flick of the television switch. But for a young soccer fan, it's not that easy.

With virtually no TV soccer coverage, many great athletes in this sport are invisible to American youth.

This weekend, however, area soccer enthusiasts will be treated to the Toledo Trust/BGSU Soccer Cup. The two-day tournament at Mickey Cochrane Field will not only provide Division I competition, but will also host an eight-team youth field.

"The neat thing about this tournament is that it ties youth soccer with collegiate soccer," Bowling Green coach Gary Palmisano said. "Kids don't get a chance to see soccer on TV."

"The best part of merging the two (college and youth soccer) is to give youth a model. It shows them what they have to do if they want to play collegiate soccer."

Eight boys teams, ages 12 and under, will begin play tomorrow morning at 9 and 11 a.m. with the last match at 6 p.m. The championship will be at 11 a.m. Sunday.

COLLEGE ACTION also begins tomorrow with Ohio State taking on West Virginia at 1:00 p.m. The BG-Northwestern matchup will follow at 3:00 p.m.. Sunday's games will pit Big-Ten rivals OSU and NU against one another at 1:00 p.m., followed by the BG-WVU game at 3:00 p.m..

After finishing second in the inaugural Soccer Cup, one might assume the host school scheduled "a more favorable tournament field." But there will be no patsy party for BG.

"Northwestern comes in with the best record (10-7-3) from last year," he said. "But the teams are basically the same with mostly freshman and sophomores on their rosters."

"But the teams are basically the same with mostly freshman and sophomores on their rosters."

"With all four teams being fairly equal, and if the weather cooperates, it will be a great weekend for soccer."

The Wildcats and Mountaineers open their seasons here while the Falcons enter this weekend 2-0-1, ranked fourth in the Great Lakes Region. The Buckeyes are 3-0.

BG, with its early season success, has not slacked off in practice - especially this week.

"The Soccer Cup is one of the highlights of our season," Palmisano said.

One area the Falcons have been working on is offense, or rather, the lack of it. BG has scored a mere three goals thus far.

"The first few days of practice this week we stressed offense in hopes of producing more goals," he said. "The first three games, it was defense that won the games for us."

WITH FALCON senior co-captain Gary Mexicotte listed as "very questionable" after a hamstring pull in last week's Louisville win, sophomore Tom Kasten will, in all likelihood, be playing forward.

"It hurts us a little depth-wise not having Gary in the lineup," Palmisano said. "But Tom is a very capable player and will play accordingly."

Kasten, however, will not be the only new face to see action in the coming weeks.

"Our younger players have tasted a little success," Palmisano said. "They've had a chance to learn and observe, which has been a very comfortable environment for them to start out in."

"Last year, we were playing freshman immediately which was like feeding them to the wolves."

With all of the "younger" players competing this weekend, the words youth soccer seem more than appropriate as a theme for this year's Soccer Cup.

Brennan not upset

BEREA (AP) - Cleveland Browns' wide receiver Brian Brennan conducted a clinic in the regular-season opener against the Chicago Bears, but he says he won't be upset if Canadian import Terry Greer starts ahead of him Sunday.

"I'd like to think I'm a little too mature to be on an ego trip about starting," Brennan said. "Those are decisions I can't worry about. I can't control them, so why worry about them?"

GREER AND rookie Webster Slaughter started ahead of Brennan in last Sunday's game against the National Football League's defending champions after Brennan had a less than brilliant preseason camp.

But in Chicago it was Brennan who proved to be the star as he had five catches for 71 yards.

One was a leaping, 20-yard catch over the middle on third and 7, a catch that kept alive the Browns' first scoring drive. The other was a 15-yard touchdown catch on a play in which tight end Harry Holt cleared out the zone and Brennan bolted into the open space for a quick six.

"They told me they played some of the younger receivers to get a better look at them in the pre-season games, which is how it is every year," said Brennan. "So I don't think I have anything to prove. I'd like to think I'm an established fellow. In this league, though, you have to prove yourself week in and week out."

This Sunday in Houston, Brennan will play an important role even if he doesn't start.

The Browns will attempt to counteract the Oilers' blitz with their 3-receiver formation in which Brennan is vitally important. Moreso than the other receivers, Brennan is adept at making the necessary adjustment in his route before the quarterback gets his helmet knocked off by the blitz.

Brennan, 5-foot-9, 178 pounds, has consciously patterned himself in this regard after Steve Largent, the star receiver from Seattle many say is bound for the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Largent's speed and 5-foot-11, 191-pound frame are not imposing. Yet he has caught a pass in 124 games in a row, three games short of Harold Carmichael's all-time record.

"Every year when we get Seattle's film, I watch their offense and I watch him," said the 24-year-old Brennan said. "He's smart. He doesn't have the speed to flat out beat people."

Bills' Kelly poses problems

CINCINNATI (AP) - The addition of standout quarterback Jim Kelly to the offense of the Buffalo Bills poses a stiffer challenge to the winless Cincinnati Bengals when the teams play Sunday, Bengals Coach Sam Wyche says.

In fact, Wyche is of the opinion that Buffalo is more potent offensively than the Kansas City Chiefs, who knocked off the Bengals 24-14 in the season opener Sunday behind Chiefs quarterback Todd Blackledge.

"There's no question they have a better offense than Kansas City. And the defense is comparable," Wyche said, as he prepared the Bengals for Sunday's home opener.

But, Buffalo has other problems. Despite the addition of Kelly, a former United States Football League standout who passed for three touchdowns in Buffalo's 28-24 loss last week to the New York Jets, the Bills have lost their last 17 road games and have posted 2-14 records the past two seasons.

SUNDAY'S GAME is crucial for the Bengals if they hope to avoid the possibilities of repeating the dismal opening month which has plagued the team the past three years. After Sunday, the Bengals are on the road to play Cleveland before returning home to face the Super Bowl champion Chicago Bears on Sept. 28.

season. Thus, the Gophers will probably experience some opening day jitters.

Secondly, Minnesota may be looking past BG to its contest next weekend with top-ranked Oklahoma.

"I'm sure they are thinking about Oklahoma," linebacker Paul Schweitzer said. "This could really help us."

Ironically, this big non-conference game comes exactly a year after BG stunned Kentucky. Like Minnesota, the Wildcats were playing their season opener, while the Falcons already had a under their wing.

Neither Kentucky or Minnesota seem to have any idea where BG is located. In fact, the Gophers' promotion office slogan for Saturday's game reads: "Yes Minnesota there is a Bowling Green."

Contraceptives easily available no "trouble"

by Meg Hanczrik
Friday Reporter

The college years are considered the most important years in a person's life. This is the time young people experiment and attempt to discover what they want out of life. With all their problems, the last thing they need to worry about is an unwanted pregnancy.

Yet, some students do not use any form of birth control. They may be embarrassed to talk to their family doctor, or they may worry about possible side effects of the various contraceptives.

Students interested in using birth control can go to the Student Health Center for help, said Teresita Domini, a physician at the health center.

The doctors at the health center will try to alleviate any fears people have about their bodies or birth control. Except for minors, doctors keep cases confidential.

Patients are given a full physical exam and are counseled about which method of birth control would best suit them. The doctors explain how the contraceptives are used and answer any questions.

The Pill, also known as an oral contraceptive, is 99 percent effective and is the most popular form of birth control used, Domini said. A woman choosing to take the Pill can get a prescription from a doctor.

According to Domini, there are a number of benefits with using the pill: less risk of developing iron deficiency anemia, ovarian cysts, rheumatoid arthritis, and menstrual pain.

Along with the benefits, there are also risks. Three to four women out of every one million can develop a benign liver tumor. Pill users are more susceptible to high blood pressure have an increased risk of getting cardiovascular diseases, Domini said. Although some users see an increase in acne, most find that their complexion improves.

"A Guide to the Methods of Contraception," a pamphlet which can be obtained at the health center, described the following contraceptives.

By using condoms, men can take responsibility for preventing an unwanted pregnancy. The only major problem with using the condom is that it might break. Three to 36 pregnancies occur for each 100 women whose partner uses a condom. The condom might help to prevent sexually transmitted diseases. If used with a cream, the condom could be as effective as the Pill.

Friday illustration by David Graham

To use a diaphragm, a woman needs to be measured by a doctor. If used correctly, the diaphragm is 97 percent effective.

This form of birth control doesn't effect the body's organs and might prevent sexually transmitted diseases. One possible risk involved is that the woman could get a urinary tract (bladder) infection.

Cream, suppositories, and aerosol foams are forms of vaginal spermicides. Although these are effective when used alone, the cream is more effective when used with the diaphragm or condom. Four to 36 pregnancies occur for every 100 users.

Both men and women may experience some irritation from these spermicides.

Doctors do not recommend the IUD (Intrauterine Device). Some women who use the IUD develop an infection in their tubes. Scarring from the infection causes a blockage in the tubes which prevents the woman from having a baby if she should want one in the future.

Debate goes on over sexy songs

by Jim Azelvandre
Friday reporter

From the playful sexual metaphors of Peter Gabriel's "Sledgehammer" to the defiant promiscuity of Madonna's "Papa Don't Preach," contemporary rock 'n' roll is upholding a thirty year tradition of sexual involvement and controversy.

The lyrics, the music, and the presentation of rock 'n' roll has, since its inception, created much dissent among the more refined and "moralistic" members of the American population. Older generations, various religions, and even politicians, have attempted to rid the nation of this "sexually blatant evil." In the past year or so, there has been a strong re-emergence of this "ban rock 'n' roll" crusade. The only difference is that this time they are making considerable headway.

The latest group out to keep our morals (among other things) intact is a pack of mothers made up primarily of influential Senator's wives, calling themselves the Parents Music Resource Center (PMRC). Alarmed by various actions of their own children that they perceived as "immoral," (PMRC president Pam Howar has been quoted as saying that one morning, while at the breakfast table, her daughter "was listening to the music, and I noticed this punk look about her") these women decided that it was time somebody put some limits on the rock 'n' roll industry.

Using the age old argument opposing rock 'n' roll's use of sex, and their husband's political power, the PMRC managed to 'persuade' the Recording Industry Association of America (RIAA) to place advisory labels on records with offensive lyrics. As of this past January, records containing sexually related lyrics must present the label "EXPLICIT LYRICS—PARENTAL ADVISORY" on the album, or the cover must display the offensive lyrics. Cassettes must contain this warning: "SEE LP FOR LYRICS". However, even this agreement falls far short of the PMRC's eventual goal. That goal involves the rating of record albums that exhibit a "destructive influence" on children (citing such mainstream artists as Prince, Madonna, Cyndi Lauper, and Sheena Easton). The PMRC believes that such ratings will result in less promiscuous and more sexually moral American teenagers.

In my personal opinion, it is futile to label or rate record albums since it is completely ignorant to believe that rock 'n' roll music causes Sexual Perversity. I have a large music collection, consisting of many diverse Rock artists, and, indeed, quite a few of them could be considered immoral by some people. This is all, very clearly, a question of individual taste and opinion.

It should be noted, however, that I am not prowling around the BG campus, libido out of control, due to the driving beat and explicit lyrics of a "violent femmes" tune.

Perhaps the following quotes along with the aforementioned actions of the PMRC will show you where I am coming from.

"We aren't censors" — the PMRC.
"Beware the savage jaw of 1984" — David Bowie.

Teen pregnancy could be curbed by education

by Dan Geiger
Friday reporter

The protesters held signs with slogans like "Stop Fornicating" and "Abortion Kills Babies." However, the clinic they were protesting against had never performed a single abortion.

All this furor was for a clinic that dispensed contraceptives. The problem, at least for the protesters, was that this clinic is in a high school.

This example illustrates the growing concern in the United States over the problem of teenage pregnancy.

According to sociology professor H. Theodore Groat, research has shown that when students have access to a school clinic, the number of unwanted pregnancies among students there falls.

"I believe we should begin setting up these clinics as early as junior high," Groat said. "We also need to begin teaching sex education in middle school so that these young people can learn the possible consequences of being sexually active."

Groat said the number of teenage pregnancies has greatly increased in the past twenty years. "The chaperone system is not used nearly as much and teenagers have a greater opportunity for sex," he said.

Another reason for the increase, according to Groat, is the suggestive rock videos, movies and television shows teenagers are exposed to everyday.

"I think television needs to be more realistic about contraception," he said. "With all the sex shown on it, you still never see any couples worrying about how they are going to prevent an unwanted pregnancy from occurring."

In the near future, Groat hopes to be doing a comprehensive study on teenage pregnancy. Groat, along with colleague Peggy Giordano, have applied to the National Institute of Health for a research grant to study family influence on sexual behavior.

The preliminary research for that study has already been completed. The subjects included 97 males and 100 females in the Toledo area. Most of them were unmarried and they were all between the ages of 17 and 19 years old.

When asked if they had ever discussed ways of preventing pregnancy with their parents, two-thirds of them said that they never or almost never did. Of the sexually active subjects, more than half of them said they did not use contraceptives.

Only 16 of the subjects claimed they were virgins. The majority of those who claimed they were not said that they had lost their virginity between the ages of 13 and 15.

Groat feels that statistics like these show that schools need state funding in the areas of sex education, delivery of contraceptives and counseling.

Casual sex: 'no longer healthy'

by Dave Skorupski
Friday reporter

It's shown in movies, portrayed in T.V. shows, talked about on radio programs and countless stories have been written in the newspapers across the U.S.A. We're talking about one-night stands.

Diane Keaton is looking for Mr. Goodbar, but what about students in Bowling Green?

Look at the local watering-holes every weekend.

It would seem that the bars are geared toward getting people closer together because of their cramped, available spaces and limited seating.

This is not to say that you are going to meet someone, but the bars do make that chance fall into your favor.

If (and when) you do meet someone new, the next question is 'now what?'

In many instances the person you have just met will have had a couple of drinks and their inhibitions are lowered. That individual's libido is probably running in overdrive and is looking for a "good time."

This brings us up to this week's question: "How do you feel about one-night stands?"

Senior political science major P.M.

Notar said he doesn't believe in one-night stands because they're not personal enough for him.

"I like to have a little bit of a relationship, nothing serious, but a little bit," Notar said.

Sophomore Journalism major Terri Ford does not believe a one night stand is likely to lead to anything past the affair.

"I'm rather against them, I think that they're not good to use to develop a relationship. They're so superficial," Ford said.

Brigitte Byrd, a freshman business administration major, doesn't agree with one night stands either.

"I don't like them because if you meet the guy that one night and sex goes on, and the next day you don't see him... it wasn't meaningful. I think sex should be a meaningful experience, it shouldn't be: SEX! and go away," Byrd said.

Jill Jackson, a sophomore business administration major said one-night stands don't work well unless there is a mutual understanding that the experience is only for that night and nothing more.

"Sometimes after one-night stands, being human, you have feelings and you could possibly care about someone... People's feelings tend to grow and expand, so it's hard to cut off after just one night," Jackson said.

Freshman business major Tracy Arnold said "I think they're alright for some people... but personally I wouldn't go for one-nights stands, at least not all the time, but if a person likes it, sure go for it."

Senior radio-television-film major Tom Cicerelli is not against one night stands, just the possible consequences.

"Do what you can get away with, and watch out for Aids," Cicerelli said.

Susan, a sophomore majoring in English and communications, agrees that there are risks involved with one night stands.

"With the bar scenes, it's easy to fall into the one-night stand traps. It might be very dangerous as far as getting sexual diseases; you can get yourself into quite a few other messes, too."

Campus Comments

Friday interviews by Kelly Vaughn

Campus Comment Question: What do you think about the alleged 'Playboy' poll that rated BGSU as the second most sexually accessible school in the country?

John Oles, junior education major from Shelby: I think it's pretty reasonable because I've seen it happen before. I have had friends come up and say they have a really good time.

Lisa Berardinelli, senior sports management major from Euclid: I think it's pretty much true based on the attitudes students have around campus. Sex is commonly accepted.

Ken Engard, sophomore chemistry major from Olmsted Falls: I think all schools are like that, but Ohio's got prettier women.

Rich Schnippel, junior IPCO major from Dayton: I think it's pretty easy too ... depending on where you go and how aggressive you are.

Sexual diseases even here at BG

by Kelley Rose
Friday reporter

Along with being sexually active comes responsibility. This not only means preventing an unwanted pregnancy, but also prevention of the dreaded sexually transmitted diseases.

Such diseases are nothing to make jokes about, because AIDS, herpes, chlamydia and other diseases can be painful, damaging to the body and even deadly.

Everyone has heard the horror stories of AIDS victims. Fortunately, there is not a single reported case in Wood County, according to Dr. Joshua Kaplan, medical director of Student Health Services. He added that although there are no cases reported on the Bowling Green campus, somebody still could be infected with it.

A person can be infected with the AIDS virus without actually having disease. According to Kaplan, it can take up to five years for an infected person to get AIDS, and only 10 to 20 percent of these people get the full-blown disease.

"There are less than 30,000 cases in the United States, but it has been estimated that there are nearly a million people that are infected with the virus," Kaplan added.

Herpes is another sexually transmitted disease but unlike AIDS, there are reported cases of it among University students, Kaplan said. He explained that the disease can cause a reoccurring, painful rash. Herpes not only affects the genital area but also can infect infants of mothers with the disease.

Kaplan said this disease has no cure, like AIDS, but drugs are used to reduce and shorten an attack. He also said that even though herpes is a sexually transmitted disease it can survive on a porcelain surface. However, "It has never been established that anyone has been infected that way."

A relatively new disease, chlamydia, has been appearing among students according to Kaplan. Until recently, there have been no tests for it. Besides that, the disease may not produce symptoms and may go undetected, Kaplan said. He added that the symptoms, which are genital discharge and pain, are the same as herpes. Chlamydia, Kaplan added, can also harm the Fallopian tubes of women and lead to sterility and complications in pregnancies.

So what about the popular gonorrhea and syphilis? Good news concerning these diseases. Over the years, Kaplan said, syphilis has disappeared from the campus due to the use of penicillin, and gonorrhea has been limited to "only maybe a dozen cases a year."

Kaplan added, "The lifestyle of casual sex is not healthy anymore. Having more than one partner is dangerous."

Gays hide lives LAGA offers support on campus

by Dianna L. Borsl
Friday reporter

"Sex is something personal between two people. What's important is that there are two people in love," Tony said.

That may sound easy, but for Tony, a homosexual, it's not.

"Everytime you say 'significant other' rather than girlfriend or turn down your stereo when playing 'Lesbian Concentrate,' it's frustrating," Ellen said. "It builds up and wears you down at the same time."

Part of the constant tension requires the use of first names only due to strong reactions against homosexuals.

"There are problems that we all face," Ellen said.

This comes from insecurity, Brad said. "People don't know what I feel, what makes me tick, they're afraid of it," Brad said. He explained it's like chemistry, fear from lack of understanding.

One step toward understanding homosexuality is to consider everyday life. "You see a heterosexual couple walking down the street, arms around each other and it's cute," Dana said. For gay couples this natural expressions of affection is frowned upon.

"It's drilled into your head that it's one way and one way only," Brad said. Magazines, television, and the culture are geared toward heterosexuality, he said.

This lack of role models can lead to problems for homosexuals identifying themselves. This is a "coming out" process. A person acknowledges and becomes comfortable with an identification that has always been there but perhaps not recognized.

"I've always been a lesbian, but it took a long time and a large process before I could apply that label to myself," Ellen said.

People can misinterpret this coming out. "People think there is a point in time when you become a homosexual," Ellen said. "To believe that it's a process, something intrinsic, is uncomfortable for some people," Ellen explained. "It's something that's always been there. It's nothing I can change," Alex confirmed.

"Coming out of the closet," can cause problems for them. "People don't judge you on the basis of the person that you are, they discard all the good qualities that you are and focus on the fact that you are gay," Alex said.

Support is available for the uninformed as well as for homosexuals. The Lesbian and Gay Alliance (LAGA), an on-campus organization, offers a variety of services. "LAGA is not just for gays, it is for supporters and friends of gays," Ellen said.

It is also a support group. "If something happens to me, I can go there, especially dealing with social pressures," Brad said. LAGA can be reached through Fact Line and The Link.

Then get in on the ground floor in our Platoon Leaders Class program for college freshmen, sophomores and juniors. You could start planning on a career like the men in this ad have. And also have some great advantages like:

- Earning $100 a month during the school year
- As a freshman or sophomore, you could complete your basic training during two six-week summer sessions and earn more than $1200 during each session
- Juniors earn more than $2100 during one ten-week summer session

- Seniors and graduates can be commissioned through the Officer Candidate Class Program
- You can take free civilian flying lessons
- You're commissioned upon graduation

If you're looking to move up quickly, look into the Marine Corps' commissioning programs. You could start off making more than $18,000 a year.

We're looking for a few good men.
